RICHARD F. CHILCOTT DIES IN SUDDEN HEART ATTACK

Nationally-Known Title Insurance Man Dies in Office While Going Over Accounts of Business; Funeral Services Will Be Held Today

Funeral services will be held at the Masonic Temple this morning for Richard F. Chilcott, well-known insurance man of San Francisco, who passed away suddenly at his office in San Francisco Tuesday evening. Services will be conducted by Redwood City Lodge No. 168 F. & A. M., of which Mr. Chilcott was a member and a past master.

Tuesday evening Chilcott had remained at the office with a few of the members of his staff for the purpose of going over some of the accounts of his business. After working for some time he complained that everything had gone black before him, and stood up. As he did so he fell to the floor. Medical aid was summoned, but it was found that death had been almost instantaneous as the result of a heart attack.

Chilcott came to Redwood City in 1904 as secretary of the former San Mateo County Abstract Company, which was later taken over by the California Pacific Title Insurance Company. He then founded the Western Title Insurance Company, which combined with the Title Insurance and Guaranty Company of which he was vice-president.

In 1906 he was married to Miss Olga Heiner, a member of a prominent family of this city. In addition to his wife he is now survived by two children, Dorothy and Richard Chilcott. The family made their home in this city until about five years ago, when they purchased a beautiful home in Atherton and removed to that city.

Mr. Chilcott was active in a number of fraternal organizations of this section. He was a member and past master of Redwood City Lodge No. 168, F. and A. M., a member of the California Bodies of the Scottish Rite in San Francisco, of Sequoia Chapter, O.E.S., and also past patron of the chapter, and a member of San Mateo Lodge of Elks. He served as master of Crocker Lodge of Masons in Daly City when that lodge was first organized.

He was considered as one of the most outstanding men in his profession in the state, and served last year as president of the Board of Title Insurance Underwriters of Northern California.

Hit-Runner Gets Six Months Term

Man Arrested in South City After Long Chase Is Given Sentence

Clarence R. Lindersmith, arrested by South San Francisco police after a car driven by him had crashed into another machine, was sentenced to a term of six months in the county jail yesterday by Judge George H. Buck.

Lindersmith was arrested last week by the South San Francisco police after police officers Antone Martin and Vincent Bianchini had chased the man nearly a mile over the marshlands lying between Mills Feld and the old Marchetti Motor plant.

Five shots fired into the air by the officers failed to halt Lindensmith after his car had crashed into the car being driven by Guilio Ricci, 1724 Grant avenue, San Francisco, on the Bayshore highway near the San Bruno road.

After hitting Ricci's car Lindensmith abandoned his car and ran across the highway to the marsh where he was finally caught hiding in a dry slough, according to the police.

He was taken by the police officers to the South San Francisco hospital where physicians pronounced him under the influence of intoxicants.

In court yesterday Lindersmith pleaded guilty to the charge and waived time for sentence.

Rittenhouse Thanks Voters

To the voters of the Eigth Congressional District:

I take this means to personally thank you for the consideration given me at the poles last Thursday in my candidacy for representative to Congress from this district. I do not regard the results of the election as an approval of present immigration laws. Far from it. Our immigration problem will grow more and more serious from day to day. In fact, I believe it will become so serious that it will force Congress to act regardless of what the personal opinions of Congressmen on this subject may be. I do not consider that my failure to be nominated is a loss. The message that I broadcasted was of greater importance than the election of an individual. Time will substantiate me in this. There have been many pleasant things to remember in this campaign. I have met many loyal American citizens, and I think I have formed friendships that will be lasting. The rejection of my candidacy at the poles does not mean that my activities for better immigration laws have ceased.

Very truly yours,
EMMET C. RITTENHOUSE

OFFICIAL COUNT GIVES ROLPH LEAD OF 1078

Wins In Tally

Mayor Rolph, the Next Governor

Results of Primary Election Still Being Checked At Courthouse

The official count of votes at the election last week is proceeding at the court house. Late yesterday afternoon the only vote which had been tallied completely was that for governor. The results in this race were found to be 9414 for James Rolph, 8336 for C. C. Young and 843 for Buron Fitts, giving Rolph a lead of 1078 over his nearest opponent in this county.

The official figures represent a substantial gain by Young over the unofficial report given last week. Young's gain was 189 votes. Rolph also profited by the new count, gaining 44 votes in the tally. Fitts lost 7 votes, having first been reported to have received 850.

The tally was complete yesterday also for members of the Republican county committee. In this race seven persons were running with six to be elected. It appears from the count yesterday that all members of the committee were elected with the exception of Ernest Werder, who was nosed out by Frank Becker, of Menlo Park, by the narrow margin of 28 votes.

Edward Harrison	3106
Dr. J. N. Blood	3085
W. H. Weeden	2870
Sam Shortridge, Jr.	2852
D. E. O'Keefe	2813
F. S. Becker	2667
E. H. Werder	2639

The results of this vote are not entirely complete as yet, however, as the ballots of 125 absent voters are not yet to be counted. As many of these are from this township, there may be some change in the personnel of the committee.

Sportsmen Organize To Oppose Change In Laws

Change in Status of Fish and Game Commission Opposed By Organization of Sportsmen and Fishermen Throughout California

Statewide organization of sportsmen for a concerted fight against the proposed initiative measure granting increased authority to the California State Fish and Game Commission is to be undertaken by the Wild Life Development League, according to announcements yesterday by Manly S. Harris of San Francisco, president of the league.

The measure is to be voted on at the November general election and has drawn widespread opposition on the ground that its adoption would invest the commission with "autocratic powers."

Directors of the Wild Life Development League, itself a statewide organization of California sportsmen, include such outstanding citizens as J. O. Tobin, vice-president of the Hibernia Bank of San Francisco Horace O'Rear, San Francisco merchant; B .H. Dias, Los Angeles merchant; Burton Adams, San Francisco produce man, and Carl Westerfeld, bay district attorney.

Opposition of the league to the proposed law will be based, according to Harris, on the contention that it is 'basically opposed to the fundamental principles of state and federal government" in that it would take the voice of the citizen out of fish and game control and allow a "five-man commission to make and enforce its own laws."

The sportsmen, Harris contends, would be left no recourse from "unfair or arbitrary edicts at which the commission might arrive," should fish and game control be taken from the hands of the State Legislature and placed in those of the commission.

"Granting of plenary powers to the State Fish and Game Commission," the San Franciscan declared, "would invest that body with powers beyond those of the governor of the state, a condition not tolerable in a democratic form of government.

"The commission, under the proposed law, would be empowered to make bag limits, close or open any and all areas for hunting and fishing, arbitrarily establish season limits, create fish and game districts embracing farms and other lands without the owners' consent, and prohibit owners from hunting or fishing on their own grounds."

Harris declared the proposed measure would imperil investments of millions of dollars in California, being dangerous to farmers, bankers and all commercial and private enterprises.

"The proposed law," he said, "would give the fish and game commision power to arbitrarily regulate the commercial fisheries of the state. It would give the commission power to close canneries by refusing or revoking licenses or permits. It would give it the power to create fish monopolies by granting permits or licenses to political favorites.

"Understand that I do not say this as a reflection upon the integrity of present members of the commission, but to show what evils are possible under the proposed law."

Harris likewise pointed out what he declared to be an evil in the law in that it exempts employes of the fish and game department from civil service, which he declared "paves the way to political manipulation of the whole department."

Dizillo of Oakland was low with a bid of $7,502.37. The highest bid was that of Louis J. Cohn in the sum of $10,368.50. The contract was awarded to Dizillo., on motion of Councilmen Hildebrant and McNulty, with the understanding that he employ local labor in the work and use local material. A contract for other concrete bridges in various sections of the city was let last month. According to City Engineer C. L. Dimmitt, 60 days will be required to complete the bridges on the Woodside Road.

Quebec Set For Festival

French - Canadian Folksong and Handicraft Fete Slated October 16th-18th

QUEBEC, Sept. 3. (UP)—One of the most important annual events the French-Canadian Folksong and Handicraft Festival, to be held here October 16, 17, and 18, in the Chateau Frontenac, this year will include a program of ballad operas, French-Canadian folksongs, dances and representations of every handicraft practiced in the Province of Quebec, as well as in old rural France.

The first ballad opera, "A French-Canadian Wedding," depicts the joyous occasion accompanying a country ceremony of this nature a hundred years ago. "L' Ordre de Ban Temps," the other opera, achieved such success on its first production that it was translated into English and produced in Vancouver.

It is derived from the diary of Marc Lescarbot, and reflects the life in the settlement of Port Royal under Champlain three hundred years ago. The revised French version, by the French-Canadian poet, Robert Choquette, will be presented at the Quebec Festival by a select cast from "La Societe d' Operette" of Montreal, with musical arrangement by Dr. Healey Willan, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

The success of these folksong festivals, especially in Quebec, has been attributed mainly to the growth of interest by Americans in this quaint province as well as in the only walled city in North America, where monuments to past glories mingle with the spires of churches and where practically every foot of ground is sacred and historic.

Kiwanis Club Given Talk On South America

Dudley Moulton, U. S. Trade Envoy, Sees Big Future For S. F. Region

An interesting talk on his trip to South America as United States trade envoy to the South American states was given Wednesday before the Redwood City Kiwanis Club by Dudley Moulton of this city, state horticultural commissioner and horticultural quarantine officer of San Francisco.

The speaker, in company with another entomologist, spent some time in visiting the South American republics in the interest of stimulating trade between the two Americas.

During his talk the speaker foretold of a great future for the San Francisco bay region, and told of the difficulties which must be overcome in some of the great harbors of South America. In the harbor of Buesnes Aires, one of the principal ports on the eastern shore of the continent, he stated ,the depth of the water is dependent upon the wind. When the wind blows from the east, the water is blown back into the harbor and is deep enough for shipping. When the wind is from the west the water is lowered and becomes too shallow for navigation. None of the ports he visited, Moulton stated, could compare with that of San Francisco bay.

The chairman of the meeting Wednesday was Louis Behrens of the First National Bank.

Exchange Club Hears of Trip Through Alaska

Members of the Redwood City Exchange Club were given an interesting and entertaining talk Tuesday evening at the regular weekly meeting of the club by Frank Griffin, Exchange member and physical director at the Sequoia Union High School.

The speaker, in company with Dale Childers, a student at the high school, recently returned from a trip to Alaska. This trip formed the basis of his talk before the club. He recounted in an interesting manner his visits to the scenes made famous by the Klondyke gold rush. The club had as its guests of honor, Chase Litlejohn and John Poole, two members of the gold rush party, and Dale Childers, the other member of Griffin's party.

The chairman of the evening was Assistant District Attorney Edmund Scott. Other guests of the club were Carl Zeh, Marshall White and Raymon Dimick. The latter gave a brief talk on the opening of the football season at the high school. Dimick is also a physical director at the high school.

Harvey entered the garage and engaged in conversation with the owner. Following his departure Paulson discovered his wallet, containing $35 in currency and several checks, missing. He notified the police and Harvey was trailed to Burlingame, where he was arrested the following day. Most of the stolen money was found on his person. He had destroyed the checks, however.

Logical Place To Encourage Thrift

By S. W. STRAUSS,
President American Society for Thrift

We are now at the beginning of a new school year. Parents, teachers and all others directly interested in sound educational progress are urged to join the great work of introducing the teaching of thrift in the schools of this country.

This work has for sometime been making steady progress and there is every reason to believe that the ensuing school year will mark the attainment of new heights in thrift education. The introduction of the school savings bank by a Belgian school master in a Long Island village many years ago has today grown to gigantic proportions and a splendid work is being accomplished. Millions of children have learned lessons of priceless value in saving money. Many succesful men today owe some portion of their progress in life to the inspiration of the little school savings bank which they learned to love in the days of their childhood.

But teaching children just to save money is not quite enough in the interest of a well-rounded thrift conception. There is, in fact, some danger of warping the child's appreciation of life's many values by the constant stressing of money. It is important that the child should learn that thrift means in every sense of the word to thrive and be successful in a fine, noble way.

For a number of years the American Society for Thrift has been working on this problem and two years ago brought out a text book in which the subject of thrift is corelated with several of the common branches. The book can be used by any school teacher in the second and eighth grades, inclusive. A copy of this book will be sent without charge to any school teacher or other school official desirous of joining this great thrift educational movement. Letters should be sent to the Society's office, 9 East 46th street, New York City.

It should be quite obvious to any fair minded person that the logical place to concentrate thrift educational effort is in the school room.

Stronger Law Asked For Alien Deportation

There is need for a statute under which aliens who persistently violate any Federal or State law for which they are imprisoned shall be expelled from the country "without the necessity of indulging in hair-splitting legal discussions as to whether or not the offenses involve moral turpitude," said the Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, W. W. Husband, in a recent address.

Many gangsters have foreign sounding names, but most of the conspicuous ones are United States citizens by birth or naturalization of their fathers while they were still minors. Mr. Husband said. In the case of gangsters who are aliens, the failure to convict them of crimes makes deportation impossible.

An alien convicted of petty thievery can be deported because theft involves moral turpitude. But a bootlegger, or in some cases a dope peddler who spends considerable time in prison, is immune from deportation because his offense is not considered as involving moral turpitude, it was pointed out.

Mr. Husband also advocated a selective immigration policy to meet legitimate industrial needs. Who is to say when industry needs men? Certainly not now with millions already out of employment.

England's Method

The Hearst papers say editorially, in criticizing the proposal for federal supervision of the activities of alien revolutionaries in this country: "England has a shrewder way of handling the problem. Our boy diplomats should study their methods."

True enough. Also our boy journalists. Just what are England's methods? Constant scrutiny of the activity of revolutionaries by Scotland Yard, a national police force. Compulsory registration of every alien remaining in the United Kingdom for longer than two weeks. Compulsory notification of the police every time an alien changes his address. It was not the London police, but Scotland Yard that raided Arcos, London commercial headquarters of Soviet Russia, and turned up the documents which resulted in Great Britain's withdrawal of soviet recognition. Scotland Yard has better knowledge today of what Russian revolutionaries are doing in the United States than is possessed by any department of the American government.

Yes, England has a shrewder method of handling the problem. The day the Hearst editorial was printed, London cables recorded the fact that the British courts sentenced to jail the publishers of the London Daily Worker, for six months past published as the British organ of the Third International, for inflammatory attacks upon the government. New York, too, has a communist Daily Worker, which for several years has published even more inflammatory appeals for the overthrow of the American government, and it is permitted to continue in the work of appealing for the destruction of American institutions by violence and the substitution of a soviet military dictatorship.

What is the real objection of the federal government knowing what its enemies are planning against it? Is it not one of the purposes stated in the federal Constitution to "provide for the common defense?"

The American government is the only important national government in the world which does not know, and has no means of knowing, what progress an openly proclaimed revolutionary movement is making within the country. Should this neglect result in a sudden and widely disastrous awakening, the people of the United States will certainly want to know why this duty of government was neglected, and why its performance was opposed by certain politicians and newspapers, at a time when preventive measures would have warded off disaster.—National Republic.

Careful Motorists Prevent Accidents

Intensive campaigns are now being conducted throughout the nation to make the public highways safe for careful, competent and responsible motorists, and to banish the danger presented to life and property by the reckless.

It is to be hoped that the campaigns will be successful. But in the meantime, the careful motorists can themselves do much to lower the accident toll by expecting the other driver to do something dangerous.

In the words of Charles F. Kettering, vice-president, General Motors Research Corporation, "It has been my experience in a great many years of driving that if you will consider the other fellow is likely to do something which he may not do, it is a great safety factor. I believe that we should alsomebody will come out of every blind alley somebody wil come out of every blind alley and make the wrong turn, because if we are and know exactly how to stop and when assuming that, we are always on the alert to stop."

This is sage advice. When assuming all other drivers are capable, the most competent and careful driver is often powerless to avert an accident. And, when lives and property are destroyed, the blame is of only secondary importance.

Every state should do its best to formulate modern, enforceable and adequate traffic laws that will protect the careful and punish and eliminate the reckless. But unshould all be pessimistic of the other feltil Utopian highway conditions arrive, we low's ability at the wheel.

REPLACES HISTORIC TRAIN FERRIES

Work on the Southern Pacific's new $12,000,000 railroad bridge across Suisun bay is nearing completion and will be ready for train operation Nov. 1. The structure will mark the passing of the fascinating but slow train ferries, for many years a part of transcontinental travel.

It Seems to Me
by
HEYWOOD BROUN

It turns out that there are seven million of us. Now that the growth of Greater New York has been vindicated, editorial writers are a little inclined to remark, "What of it?" and to pretend that, unlike the boosters in other American cities, size is not important as far as we are concerned.

Still, before the returns came in from the missing districts there was grave concern. The population of Manhattan Island has been shrinking steadily, and there are inhabitants in this borough who feel that folk in Brooklyn and the Bronx are really hinterlands and not authentic citizens of New York at all. But now that they have saved our face in the matter of population total, we are glad to include them in our fold.

Thanks for Nothing.

But it is a curious thing that city dwellers should welcome a huge increase. What does it mean? Two people standing on your feet in the subway where only one grew before, higher rents, higher prices, more honking of automobile horns, a greater litter on the beaches and park lawns.

Never have I been able to understand the ghastly fear which fills some people at the mention of the phrase "race suicide." I am not denying the right of any group to be fruitful and multiply. Generally speaking, I am glad when friends of mine announce the birth of a son or a daughter. I think it is fine for them to have a child—that their common happiness will be increased. And yet it fills me with no enthusiasm at all to learn that hundreds of thousands of families have also had their share of blessed events.

I think I speak frankly in saying that I would not mourn much if the census figures of any decade showed that Chicago had gone beyond us. I would not even grudge the boon to Baltimore or Los Angeles. The thought of millions of brand new native sons is naturally a little terrifying, but after all, the man who picks his steps with care need meet only a few.

The High Hats of New York.

To be sure, every New York newspaper writer profits in prestige—and possibly in stipend—from the fact that his home town happens to be America's metropolis. The lads from even self-sufficient Chicago give ground a little when the big town representatives arrive. Something of a magnifence still exists in the phrase "a New York newspaperman."

But, though I would be almost the last to argue against the leadership of this city, I hate to think that its reputation should rest upon more weight of numbers. Indeed, I would welcome a day of dwindling. New York would still be New York if only half this size. Though Chicago topped us by a million or more, the perfect Manhattanite might even then put visitors from the Windy City in their place by elevating one eyebrow and murming, "A middle Westerner, I believe."

For instance, the fact that New York sets the pace in theatrical productions for the rest of the country is not wholly dependent upon the circumstance that we are big. Discriminating theatregoers, represent only a tiny fraction of the population. Indeed, a good many of them are not New Yorkers at all, but visitors from distant places who have sought communion with the modern Athens.

It is the depth of New York life, and not its width and length, which should be our boast. Some of the largest of American cities are among those most dead and deadly in their inner spirit. Boston, for instance, flourished more brilliantly in years when it was far less populous. There once were literature and music and a little bootlegged sculpture. Yet today a bigger Boston is known as a grubby town where anything of imagination dies at birth and only the most heavy-minded musical comedies have a chance of survival.

But, Speaking Seriously—

Not all which has been set down so far is seriously intended, but it is well in earnestness to inquire into the quality of growth rather than its quantities. Few communities have ever been able to avoid matching a high birth rate with a corresponding rise in the ratio of deaths.

For the good of all, population might proceed at a reduced pace until we have more parks, more air, more jobs.

Mr. Malthus Said It.

Though Malthus lived a long time ago, it does not seem to me that any economist has been able to shatter his fundamental proposition that population tends to increase more rapidly than means of sustinence. Malthus had no conception of improvements in agricultural machinery, farming methods and means of quick distribution. But the fact remains that no city has ever grown fast without adding mightily to its slums and to its army of the deserving poor.

I would be more enthusiastic about New York's increase if I knew that somewhere people planned new schools and hospitals and recreation centers in advance to serve the need of each new battalion of arrivals. But in a city sore beset I do not feel disposed to join either those who meet the cenby congestion and gravely hampered by its hurrying crowds sus figures with "Hurrah!" or those who say, "What of it?"

My own emotion is, "What a pity!"

The School Bell

Love's Sacrifice
By Mildred Barbour

"What's the matter between you and Harding?" he had asked Lois, although he knew quite well.

CONCERNING THE ACTION AND CHARACTERS

Sally Todd and Lois Montgomery leave home to seek their fortunes in New York.

Lois meets a young man whom she knew when she was a wealthy woman's secretary.

He and a chap named FRISBY show her and Sally little attention, but Lois' thoughts are chiefly on the problems of existence.

Lois finally gets a job with a firm of interior decorators. Sally struggles for a foothold in the movies. They have a hard time making both ends meet.

Sally enters hospital training, finally convinced that the films hold no future for her.

CHAPTER 11

Tempering Winds

With Sally off her hands Lois rented better quarters. She had only one room, and it was way, way, way up-town, but still accessible, and a tiny closet revealed an unexpected kitchenette, where she prepared her breakfast and her merger dinner She had learned to go without lunch.

Her evenings were free, now that Philip Harding was disposed of. Sally, of course, had only an occasional evening off. So Lois put in her time studying. Mrs. Dunleigh directed her reading and research. She took Lois briskly and eagerly over the same road she herself had traveled some fifteen years before. Lois couldn't have had a greater stroke of luck than to win the interest of Mrs. Dunleigh, who, after a time, began to give her opportunities to test her ability and talents.

As she made good, her salary increased proportionately, and with it, little by little, she was able to afford better quarters and better clothes. Her good taste enabled her to look very smart and prosperous on an absurdly small sum. She now had to dress well, for already she was being sent out to interview customers. The work was mostly routine, it was true, but certainly outside the province of ordinary "shoppers."

She saw little of Sally, although she always expected her for dinner and a good long gossipy chat on Sally's evening off duty from the hospital. Sally, however, often disappointed her, but Lois was never deeply hurt. She knew that Sally loved a good time and had only a few evenings. The training was drudgery and the hardest work lazy little Sally had ever done in her life.

When her back seemed breaking and her feet ached and her prettty hands were rough and chapped from scrubbing floors and she looked anything but fetching, with her uncurled hair scraggling down under a practical mob cap, she would comfort herself with the thought of what lay beyond the arduous training. She visualized herself in a crisp white uniform, with a ravishing cap on her blonde curls, tripping daintily up to the bedside of a handsome masculine patient and proffering a cool drink. She always envisioned her prospective patients in the convalescent stage of their malady, when they were able to be both grateful and admiring. Her imagination never extended to fevered nights and irritable mornings before charge was shaved and bathed by an orderly and the room set to rights by a probationer. Her entrance on the scene always began with the arrival of roses, which she would arrange in a vase on the bedside table; then her patient would remark that she looked like a rose herself in her fresh white uniform, and she would say: 'I guess we'll have to take your temperature - - - that sounds like fever to me!' though of course, she would see the unmistakable admiration deepening to ardor in his eyes.

Martin Frisby still hung around Sally. He'd tried to rush Lois, after Sally's departure for the hospital, but had received a snub for his pains.

"What's the matter between you and Harding?" he had asked Lois, though he knew quite well. Harding had, strange to say, confessed his failure.

Lois answered evasively that she was to busy to bother with evening engagements. She was trying to learn the interior decorating business, she explained.

But it was lonely, with Sally at the hospital, for she had no other friend, except her employer, who had a family of her own and not much time, outside of office-hours, to give to her young protege.

Lois was in the difficult position of having to refuse the associates she might have had and of being unable to make the acquaintance of people she wanted to know.

At first Sally had brought her beaux to call on Lois. There was a strict rule at the hospital against nurses or probationers going out with doctors or internes on the staff. But you simply chose a movie in a remote part of town and trusted to luck that you didn't encounter anyone who knew you, or would report you. Otherwise, you spent the evening at the home of a convenient and sympathetic friend. Lois's modest room had a home-like air, so Sally and her friends found it a pleasant place. They could even make rarebits on Lois's two-burner gas-stove.

Lois, although no older than Sally, had always felt curiously responsible for her friend. Sally was so little and joyous, rather like a kitten. Lois had always been afraid for Sally, somehow, although she had given every evidence of being able to take care of herself. But she was impulsive and imaginative and incurably romantic.

Lois was always glad to meet Sally's friends. If she approved of them, she always found some excuse for going to the library to read up on Greek art or Egyptian pottery or Renaissance painting, and left Sally and the young man to chaff over the rarebit.

Lois didn't know, of course, of the evenings Sally spent with youths of the Martin Frisby type. when synthetic champagne at a road-house took the place of a rarebit. She would have worried mightily, had she known, though she was in no sense Sally's keeper, nor did she try to be. And Sally deceived her, not from any desire to avoid censure, but because she knew that she was playing with fire.

When the two girls had been in New York a year, Lois's brother, Steve, came to see them. Unlike Bert, he looked awkward and ill at ease in his city clothes. He was a young Viking at home in overalls, as blond as Lois was dark.

Sally was, apparently, so overjoyed to see Steve that the slow, kindly fellow was in the seventh heaven. He thought it was all over, except the ringing of the wedding-bells. But Sally would have exhibited the same enthusiasm at the sight of anyone from home.

He asked her to marry him immediately.

She refused him, of course. He went back home dejectedly. Sally saw him off at the station. Neither of them had any idea of the circumstances under which they should next meet.

Last Lava Flow From Mt. Lassen Was About 1851

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug 30. (UP)—Mt Lassen, the only active volcano in the United States, probably had its last lava flow during the winter of 1850-51—about the time California's famous "gold rush" was well under way.

This conclusion has been reached by R. H. Finch and C. A. Anderson, instructors in geology at the University of California, as a result of a study of Cinder Cone, a prominence about 10 miles east-northwest of Lassen Peak, at the base of which the lava flow occurred.

In their investigation, the two men found evidence to support the belief that there had been five lava flows from Ciner Cone, instead of two as previously recorded.

Their evidence checks fairly well with the findings of A. E. Jones of the Hawaiian Valcanic Observatory in 1928. Jones tested the magnetic declinations of various lava deposits, declaring that an a basis of his studies there were flows in 1846, perhaps in 1800, one or two more in 1300, one in 1200, perhaps one in 1150, and probably one each in 550 and 500 A. D.

Concerning historical evidence for the last lava flow at Cinder Cone in the winter of 1850-51, Finch and Anderson said: "Harkness states that lights were observed to the east of Lassen "Butte' from time to time, but that because of hostile Indians no attempt was made to ascertain the cause of the lights.

"During the winter Dr. O. M. Wozencraft observed from a point above Red Bluff, west of Lassen peak, a great fire to the east of the peak, which continued for many nights without change of position. This caused him to reject the theory that the lights were from Indian camp fires.

"Charles Gibbes and party of miners witnessed the same lights from Angeles Camp and referred to them as being due to volcanic eruption. Two prospectors arriving at Georgetown, Eldorado county, during the summer of 1851 reported passing an active volcano and hot rock in a locality that agrees with that of the Ciner Cone county."

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS ??

Who am I? What am I?

Can I know myself as I am?

What are my predominant characteristics? My faults and good points? Strength and weaknesses? Likes and dislikes?

How do I appear to other people? What do they really think of me? Am I agreeable or not?

What is my true vocation in life?

Why have I failed in many things I have attempted? Did I succeed in other things because of natural ability?

Why do I take kindly to some folks? Why do I dislike others at sight?

THESE ARE A FEW OF THE QUESTIONS EVERYONE IS CONSTANTLY ASKING HIMSELF.

YOU MAY NOT KNOW YOURSELF AS YOU SHOULD, BUT YOU CAN IF YOU WILL.

At Least 6 Volunteers from the Audience Will Be Given A Free Character and Vocational Analysis Each Evening.

HOW TO SOLVE YOUR PROBLEMS

By James M. Heady, Psy. D.

Lesson No. 3.

In which you are told, "How to get what you want."

What if I don't get it? Then try, try, again!

"Cum esset Caesar in Gallia evrant." No, it was not in Gaul, but in one of his sojourns in Rome, that Caeser, who was later a victim of political racketeers, remarked to Cleopatra (who has since been canonized as the patron saintess of Hollywood): "Cleo, the trouble with you girls is that after you get what you want, you don't want what you wanted at all."

While this is true of many things it is not true of the subject we were studying yesterday. We all want health, but as Mark Twain said and wrote. "Everybody is talking about the weather, but nobody is doing anything about it." So lots of people are talking about health and even studying about it, but not doing anything about it. Even physicians and their families and friends get sick and die about the same as anyone else. Why? Not because they want to die, not even the man who is sure he is going to heaven. He may want to go, but as a rule he balks at the idea of having to die in order to get there.

So that brings us to the first point of "How to get what you want. If you want to die by a long-drawn-out process with a lot of suffering thrown in, keep on violating the laws of right living and right thinking.

Asks for Letters

When I finish the list in today's lesson there may be someone who will react like the Englishman who was "doing" America. A friend was showing him the sights of Coney Island. The last place visited was a sideshow where a man was throwing knives at a woman strapped against a board. After watching the exhibition for a while, the Englishman said with a yawn, "Let's go on, he's been throwing at her for five minutes and hasn't hit her once."

If I don't seem to hit your case, write me a letter, at The Times-Gazette, and I'll try to be of assistance.

The most destructive emotion is fear, and the outstanding fact is that the things we fear most never happen. Fear is usually based on ignorance. People once feared the elements, believing that thunder and lightning were the outbursts of an angry God or gods. Now we know better—at least most of us do.

But you say: "Is there nothing to fear? Should we not fear to do wrong?" I say, "Don't do wrong." When you know that the thing you are doing or contemplating doing is wrong, the desire will cease to exist and there is no consicous action without desire.

Worry and all other destructive emotions have their foundations in fear. Without fear they are like the man who was taking his first horseback ride. He had ridden only a short distance when the saddle girth broke ,causing the saddle to fall to the ground and at the same time causing the horse to begin a runaway. Hulda, who was standing to one side as Ole and the horse dashed by, shouted, "Yump, Ole yump!" With the little breath left in him, Ole shouted: "How can I yump when I got no place to stood?"

So without a place to "stood," destructive emotions cannot exist.

At the head of the list of the psychological factors of which fear is the foundation is worry, the basic cause of untold physical and mental agony. As perfect love or education casts out fear, so common sense destroys worry. Let me give you my favorite slogan. It is: "Nothing ever has occurred or ever will occur that is important enough to worry about."

Make a record of that and play it several times a day.

When you're feelin' real disgusted
Up against it, down and out;
When you've hit the grit for certain.
'Tain't no use to fume and pout!
Just remember there are others
Who've felt as bad as you—
Don't forget the other fellow
Has been up against it, too!

And he's come out clear and smilin',
Holds his head high like a man—
You can do the same, old party;
Laugh at Fate! Of course you can!
Overhead the sun is shining,
All around the sky is blue!
Don't forget, the other fellow
Has been up against it, too!

I will not attempt a pathological analysis of the reaction and action of the destructive emotion on your body except to say that an "obsessed" mind is as destructive as "abcessed" teeth. Nor will I enumerate al the different "children" begotten of fear. I have touched on worry. If you are a "worrier" you are poor company for yourself and everyone else. I'd not enjoy living with a "worrier." No one else does.

Jealousy Unnecessary

Next to worry comes jealousy that unquestioned evidence of an inferiority complex. Jealousy indicates a lack of self-confidence and a lack of confidence in the intelligence or integrity of another. Jealous people are broadcasting this message: "I do not trust myself or other people in matters of vital concern. I am a good starter but a poor finisher."

Think it over—if I am wrong please correct me.

We could analyze hate, envy and the rest of the list, and prove that the cause, the result and the remedy were identical with the elements numerated.

So the first step in how to get what you want is to eliminate the fear that you are not going to get it.

Next, make up your mind as to what you want. That is so much easier said than done. Life is like a child standing in front of a candy store with a dime in his hand. We see so many things we want, and it's difficult to make up our minds. However, we must—whether it be a new hat, a husband or wife, a business or job, or an automobile, we must first decide what we want.

Depend on Self

Then assume full responsibility for desiring as well as obtaining your want. Some one asked concerning a friend, "Did he take his trouble like a man?" "Just exactly," was the answer, "he blamed it all on his wife." We are apt not only to blame others for failures, but to look to others for help in our success. Other people can help you and probably will, but to be on the safe side, take the opposite view and depend only on yourself and take all the responsibility yourself.

After this, prepare to take whatever steps are necessary in order to reach your want. This is a matter of information to be gained by study. I can assure you that in the lession to be found in this column will be the basis of that study.

Last, after you have cast out fear, have decided what you want, have decided that there exists no real reason that you should not have your want and you have prepared to take the steps leading to your desire, then—

Forget all about the final goal—merely take the steps and the result will take care of itself. The Bible puts it this way: "Whatsoever things you desire, when you pray, believe that you receive them and you shall have them."

It's good Scripture and good psychology.

I'd like to change a familiar quotation to read like this:

Trust the future, for 'tis pleasant
Let the dead past bury its dead;
Act, act in the living present,
Heart within and God o'erhead!

Before you can begin the intelligent study of practical psychology, there is another study, human analysis: Who am I? What am I.

WOODSIDE

Miss Heath Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Hamilton of Woodside was married on Saturday afternoon at Palo Alto to Mr. John C. Ainsworth. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents here. More than three hundred friends came to pay their respects to the young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Monroe spent the holiday week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Folger.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Swinnerton and family moved back to their home in San Francisco on Monday.

The Parent-Teacher Association held its first meeting of the year on Thursday afternoon at the headquarters of the Association. Mrs. B. D. Ralston, the new president was in charge of the program. Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, County Superintendent of Schools. was the invited guest at the meeting.

Miss Marjorie Josselyn has begun the construction of her home on a sightly knoll on the northern boundary of the Josselyn property. She has been living for the last two years in the Dr. Topham cottage which was purchased some time ago by Mrs. William P. Roth.

Special services were held on Sunday at the Church of Our Lady of the Wayside at Portola. The music was in charge of members of the Family farm. The Little Church was crowded to the doors by its many friends from Woodside and Portola.

That Woodside might not lag behind other progressive communities of the State, arrangements are being made for the installation of a miniature golf course. Mr. Frank H. Mowwe is sacrificing some of his fine shade and fruit trees to provide the space in which youngsters of all ages may pursue the little pill about an eighteen hole course. He will also have a soft drink and sandwich place adjoining the golf course. Woodside wives will now know where to search for husbands during the late evening or early morning hours.

MENLO PARK

The Stanford University contemplates building on San Francisquito creek east of the Searsville Lake a dam to cost approximately $350,000. The citizens of Palo Alto have protested through the board of Public Works against the construction of the dam on the ground that it will divert the water from the creek that flows to the bay through thousands of acres of rich land. The wells in the neighborhood would suffer materially from this diversion and work an injury on all property owners in the vicinity of the stream. The university desires the construction of the dam for the storage of water for the grass on the golf links south of the proposed dam.

The Pacific Coast Military Academy here has just completed a large concrete swimming tank for its pupils on the grounds near the academy buildings. It is to fill a long felt want.

The local miniature golf course in Menlo Park is receiving a large patronage from San Francisco fans particularly during these delightful evenings. They run down in their automobiles for dinner at the Alabama Chicken Shack and play the game until midnight. The cold fog of the city make playing on the links uncomfortable.

There is a movement on foot to organize a chamber of commerce in town, the old organization having passed out of existance some years ago. There are numerous problems confronting this city that need the aid of a live chamber of commerce. The opening of Oak Grove avenue through to meet the Bayshore Highway, the contract for its construction having been awarded yesterday, is of vital importance to Menlo Park. A wide awake chamber of commerce could materially assist in the enterprise. The Berry Aircraft Corporation located on the Bay Shore opposite the Base hospital needs assistance in its enterprise. The factory will employ hundreds of men in making the vertical airplane. This community would benefit by this enterprise. The daming of San Francisquito creek by Stanford University requires a protest from this community that is to be injured if the dam is constructed. Many years ago Senator Stanford secured all the raparian rights from adjoining land owners and may have the power to erect a dam but certainly the people have some rights in the matter that could be ascertained by a live chamber of commerce working for the interest of the community.

As an evidence of the growth and prosperity of Menlo Park it might be recited that it became known that a small cottage was to become vacant on September 15 of this month. Already the owner has received six applicants for the cottage. This shows the dearth of houses.

At the last meeting of Menlo Fire Department an application was received from the residents and taxpayers of East Palo Alto to become a part of the fire department. The people of that district are unanimous on the proposition to join Menlo. For a long time there was some opposition but that has vanished and now all are enxious to be a part of us.

Notre Dame Convent at Belmont opened on Tuesday for the fall term with a large attendance from Menlo Park. Miss Emily McCarthy, a charming and talented girl, who is a senior in the institution, will be a boarder this year. Her brother, Joseph McCarthy, has begun his college career at Santa Clara and is majoring in medicine.

The grammar school opened last week with a record attendance, the largest in its history. St. Joseph's Parochial school opens next week with every seat taken. The Sacred Heart Academy opens soon. A big change has taken place in the faculty of the institution.

Miss Betty McCann, the pretty and charming daughter of M. A. McCann, has entered the Junior College at San Mateo. She graduated with honors from an exclusive school at Palo Alto last June. The McCanns are erecting a palatial residence at Atherton.

The town council has received a letter from F. Barman, Jr., a real estate man residing in the Hermosa tract, complimenting the fire chief and the chief of police for the efficiency of both chiefs for their effective work at the blaze.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Baltzer Peterson of Atherton was baptized and given the name of Mae Jeanne, on Sunday, August 24, in the Menlo Park Catholic Church by Father Thomas J. Kennedy. The name, Mae, was given her for her paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Ferdinand C. Peterson, and Jeanne for her mother and Mrs. Peterson's mother. The godmother was Mrs. W. H. Brophy of Los Angeles and Phoenix, Arizona. A reception was held at the Peterson home after the christening.

Vital Statistics Of State Gathered By Official Bureau

By J. F. McLAUGHLIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept 1. (UP)—" - according to the state bureau of vtial statistics."

California newspapers often carry this line in items, but few citizens know of the story behind development of this important bureau in state activities.

There was a time in California when births, deaths and marriage were kept in a desultory fashion. Inconceivable as it may seem to us today, these records were not considered important.

Not until 1905 was this state admitted to the United States death registration area, a classification which means that the state has fulfilled rigid requirements in maintenance of its records.

Far before then, however, state officials had recognized the need of compiling such information. In 1858 an act was passed which demanded state registration of vital statistics in California.

Edward R. Campbell was appointed state registrar and held this office for the two years the act was in effect. Due to lack of co-operation of state officials the act was repealed in 1859, after being in force but two years.

During the years 1859 and 1905 such records were kept in haphazard fashion. Births were seldom re-recorded; deaths were occasionally registered, but marriage records were almost inveriably entered upon the books of county recorders.

Some of the mountain counties today have vital statistics records which date back to 1846 and 1850. Complete registration of all vital statistics cannot be said to have begun before 1905, however.

George D. Leslie was California's first state registrar under the law passed in 1905 by the legislature. A graduate of the University of California, Leslie was appointed as special assistant in the U. S. Bureau of the Census upon recommendation of Benjamin Ide Wheeler, then president of the University.

Chosen from this position as state registrar, Leslie built up an organization that has functioned under his method since then. Although several registrars have occupied the post since his death in 1919.

TRADE COMMITTEE USES THREE LANGUAGES AT SACRAMENTO MEETING

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 30. (UP)—The business of buying and selling has no language.

That's why the representatives of 22 Latin-American countires and the United States—speaking three different tongues—are getting along so famously at the Pan-American Reciprocal Trade Conference here in the state capital of California.

English, Spanish, Portuguese sit around the conference tables argue with each other over tariff, credits, market news and customs. But all are smiling, soft-spoken courteous.

Although the convention is strictly unofficial, and none of the delegates came instructed, it has the sanction of President Hoover and California's State government.

Said Governor Young:

"Coming on the heels, as it were, of the good-will tour of President Hoover shortly after his election, in which he visited many of the South American and Pan-American nations, and the airplane trip of Colonel Charles Lindbergh, who has shortened the distance of communication between ourselves and our neighbors to the south, the conference now under way should go down in history as an epoch-making event."

The "guiding hand behind the assembly is Simon J. Lubin, far-seeing Sacramento merchant and son of the late David J. Lubin, who founded the first International Agricultural Institute at Rome, Italy. Lubin was chosen at the first meeting as president of the conference. He also heads the Sacramento Region Citizens' Council, composed of 22 Northern California counties, under whose auspices the conference it held.

To California farmers, the meeting is of prime significance. It will remove trade barriers and open the way to wider foreign markets for California produce. Some of the subjects being discussed are: Compilation and exchange of commercial mercial disagreements; transportation of passengers and merchandise; terminal facilities; exchange of communication by ship, airplane, cable, wireless, telegraph and telephone; quarantine regulations; pure food laws; encouragement of tourist tarvel; education, including exchange of professors and students; fruit culture—packing, drying and canning processes, and good roads—Pan-American and International highways.
